JEWISH FEDERATION OF ST. LOUIS
Report to the Community
2012
A NEW YEAR. A NEW FEDERATION.

2011 marked a new and exciting era for Jewish Federation and our Jewish community. Guided by Federation’s strategic plan, crafted in 2010 with extensive community input, it defines a common agenda for St. Louis.

The current hot topic in nonprofit management is “collective impact.” John Kania and Mark Kramer in the Stanford Social Innovation Review described collective impact as, “...the commitment of a group of important actors from different sectors to a common agenda for solving a specific social problem.” This goes well beyond the idea of collaboration. It is considered essential in order to tackle complex social issues. These are challenges that single organizations – no matter how capable or innovative – cannot take on alone.

Collective impact is at the heart of Federation’s unique role. Indeed, the Federation network is a prototype for achieving collective impact. The article describes conditions essential for collective impact, including a common agenda and “backbone support organizations.”

Federation is uniquely structured to play the backbone role. We convene the entire community to plan for meeting needs and solving problems. Federation mobilizes the necessary human, intellectual and financial resources. We connect the Jewish community to government and civic resources. And Federation links St. Louis to the national and international Jewish community to meet global Jewish needs.

Federation’s backbone role is apparent in several of the most significant achievements of the past year.

The new Millstone Institute for Jewish Leadership implements one of our six strategic priorities – the development of exceptional human resources. This community-wide effort is unprecedented in the North American Jewish community, making St. Louis a leader in human resource development.

Through the Millstone Institute, we are bringing together diverse leaders - new and established - to acquire the skills and knowledge and to create the culture of collaboration necessary for our community’s success.

Create a Jewish Legacy has brought together 18 agencies and congregations, as well as national resources, in an exciting project that, since inception in 2009, has raised just over $20 million in cash and bequest commitments. Federation is providing training, marketing, assistance and even financial incentives to grow the resources of the entire Jewish community.

And Federation’s leadership, planning and funding role was critical to the successful day school merger and creation of the new Saul Mirowitz Jewish Community School.
We have also made significant progress in other aspects of our new strategic plan. To achieve greater impact, we have shifted more dollars to specific strategic program initiatives such as:

- Dramatic expansion of PJ Library, a highly successful program that engages young Jewish families by providing free, high quality, Jewish books and CDs to children up to age seven.
- Greater support for young adult programs such as NextDor, Moishe House, the Karen Solomon Young Adult Initiative and Birthright Israel. A new initiative to fund St. Louis Birthright buses greatly enhances our ability to connect Birthright alumni with our local community when they return.
- New funding to increase the number of influential, non-Jewish, civic, political and business leaders who visit Israel.
- Increased funding to meet demand for homemaker services for low income elderly.
- New funding to support the development of a pluralistic, Reform Jewish community in our Partnership region of Yokneam and Megiddo.
- New funding to support Israeli organizations focused on empowerment of women, at-risk children and youth and to assist victims of terror.
- Creation of a new Innovation Fund to support local Jewish social entrepreneurs who want to develop new programs that inspire Jewish identity and engagement.

These accomplishments came despite the fact that 2011 saw our fourth annual campaign decline triggered by the economic crisis of 2008. Combined with limited investment growth, we are challenged to meet rising demands for service. However, progress on the 2012 campaign is encouraging, and we hope that this year will see a return to fundraising growth. Consistent with our strategic plan, we have also introduced new opportunities for restricted and special project giving with five new Fields of Interest Funds, and specialized campaigns for the Saul Mirowitz Jewish Community School, Birthright Israel and PJ Library.

Finally, accompanying a planned volunteer leadership transition, Federation completed its search for the next President & CEO. We are pleased to welcome Andrew Rehfeld, Ph.D., who will bring new vision, energy and success to the Jewish Federation.

We want to close with enormous gratitude to our leaders, volunteers, staff, agencies, organizations and congregations. Without them we could not succeed. And we are most thankful to you, our donors, whose vision, philanthropy and commitment powers all we do to build a thriving Jewish community and a bright future.

Sincerely,

Robert Millstone
Board Chair
